

For Dave, watercolor painting is an attempt to relate the emotion of nature's light show. Art has always been a passion for him. He studied fine art at Mesa Junior College in San Diego in the late 60s. Viet Nam and other issues interrupted the process. Later in the late 70s he studied under watercolor master, Jerry Stitt in Redmond Washington. After a busy life as a firefighter and family provider he built a boat and sailed away for 10 years with his then girlfriend, Judy. In French Polynesia the beautiful light show reappeared... "it was like biting into some sweet juicy fruit." Dave took up the brushes again. He painted small format works as he sailed with his wife Judy to 36 countries and over 36,000 ocean miles. After 10 years of voyaging, Dave and Judy have moved back on land. Now having a stable land based environment, he continues the quest. He is a member of the San Diego Watercolor Society, and now the Carlsbad Oceanside Art League.
