

LEE KOHSE BIOGRAPHY

Lee Kohse was born to a family of rutabaga testers in California and as a child learned to draw in the dirt while mining dust for spaghetti western films. While serving in the Marine Corps, he started doing art for underground comics and indie rock magazines. During this time he discovered a copy of Photoshop while on an archeological dig in a broom closet and learned its secrets. After surviving a nasty case of Nerd Flu, Lee became a freelance artist working for such clients as Lucasfilm, DreamWorks, Marvel, 20th Century Fox, has contributed art to such projects as Star Wars, Indiana Jones, Lord of the Rings, Aliens Vs Predator, as well as serving as Creative Director of Speed Racer. Lee believes that software is just another tool for creating art and story telling and frequently uses digital mediums to improve his traditional art workflow. Currently Lee is working as a freelance artist and partnered Creative Streamer on Twitch.tv, you can find Lee creating art several times a week live at www.twitch.tv/kohseart.
